Dear [redacted]

25X1

Continuing development of new space systems and technologies has led me to believe that the organizations which have a major interest in the future of foreign or domestic space activities would profit from a stimulating interchange of information and ideas. As a step in that direction [redacted]

25X1

[redacted] and I are sponsoring a colloquium on 3 and 4 June to discuss possible military, civil, and other missions in space during the next two decades and beyond by examining new systems concepts and technologies.

25X1

We invite you to attend this colloquium and in particular we request that, following the general discussions, you serve as a member of a three-man panel which will formulate the findings of the colloquium. The panel discussion will serve as the basis for a published colloquium report. The other panel members will be [redacted]

25X1

A dinner for colloquium participants will be held in the Executive Dining Room of CIA Headquarters on the evening of 3 June. We hope you will be able to join us in this part of the colloquium as well.

The colloquium will be held at CIA Headquarters. Participants will be limited to 50 of the most knowledgeable persons involved in future space systems and technologies including those who will present papers. The discussion will be at the SI/TK/BYE level of classification.

We encourage you to accept our invitation to this important colloquium on the future in space. We will provide complete details about arrangements at a later date.

Sincerely,

7-1 B. R. Inman
